

Physics Student Code of Conduct

The University of California, Berkeley has established a number of policies and procedures that bear upon all students (Student Policies and Procedures). Among these is the "Code of Student Conduct" (PDF), which notes that:

"Members of the University community are expected to comply with all laws, University policies and campus regulations, conducting themselves in ways that support a scholarly environment."
Berkeley Physics students are expected to adhere to all aspects of the university's "Code of Student Conduct," and failure to do so may lead to disciplinary action, including suspension or dismissal from the university.

Departmental Response to Alleged Violations of the Student Code of Conduct

The Physics Department reserves the right to intervene in situations where the disruptive behaviors of one student, whether within the department or off-campus, adversely affect the academic progress or scholarly environment of one or more fellow students. Any individual report of disruptive behavior will be referred to the Center for Student Conduct and/or the Title IX Office as appropriate. In addition, the department will respond to credible and consistent reports of disruptive behavior, regardless of whether an official complaint is filed with the Center for Student Conduct or Title IX Office. If the department determines that behaviors of a student are disrupting the academic progress or scholarly environment of others, the department will take appropriate actions, potentially including but not limited to restriction from participation in designated privileges and activities. Continuation of the disruptive behavior or failure to comply with a departmental directive may be cause for further disciplinary actions under the "Code of Student Conduct," including suspension or dismissal from the university.
